Contributing

All contributions welcome!

If you want to contribute, please contact the Goat on Discord to set up an account.
Registrations aren't open to avoid SPAM.

Guidelines

Basically, this wiki should document everything about using a Hackberry.

If you came across a problem and solved it, had to adjust something that isn't documented, or have an awesome project to share, it belongs in here!

Structure

My goal is to create a knowledge structure that is

```
1) easily searchable, and
2) not convoluted.
```

My thoughts so far is to lean on the Zettelkasten system for the structure of the wiki articles.
This means that topics should be somewhat atomic. If a topic can be considered its own topic, it gets its own article. Any topics related to it should link to it or be linked to.
However, I don't want the wiki to be super granular. The pages for the individual OS' for example will include instructions for all the versions of the Hackberry. Dividing it up would make the wiki too cluttered in my opinion.

But don't get hung up on what should go where. If you have an idea or a contribution, just get it into the wiki as fast as possible. Relocating content is easier than writing it in the first place. Just Do It

Contributions

Don't be afraid to contribute, even if it seems like it's trivial!
If you read something in the Discord that is not yet in here: post it!
If you want to fix spelling mistakes: correct them!
If you feel there's something missing: add it!

You can take inspiration from existing articles to create new ones or amend existing ones that still need some polishing.

I can't be arsed to do this...

That's fine! If you have an idea or you found something to fix, but don't want to sign up and go through the effort yourself, just tell someone! Hit up the Goat in Discord and let him know!

We also have a Goals page to document milestones and To Dos for the wiki that need to wait until there's time to implement them.

From:
https://hackberry.cyberrr.space/ - Hackberry

Permanent link:
https://hackberry.cyberrr.space/doku.php?id=contribute

Last update: 2025/06/05 20:43